Fifteen Years Kendra Norman-Bellamy

Josiah (JT) Tucker, the son of a substance-dependent and neglectful mother, spent most of his childhood years in the custody of the State, living in foster homes throughout Atlanta, Georgia. At the age of fourteen, he was taken from the foster family that he had grown to love the Smiths, and returned to his negligent birth mother. Enduring the hardships faced while living with his birth mother, JT manages to makes something of his life.

However, fifteen years after being taken from the Smiths and at the peak of success, he finds himself feeling empty and at his lowest. When he decides to reconnect with the Smiths, JT finds his faith in God renewed and discovers his attraction to his foster sister.
