Easter People In A Good Friday World: Making Wise Moral Decisions James B. Hofrenning

The author asserts that Christians are an "Easter People" (made new of the resurrected Christ) trying to discern the will of God and make wise, moral decisions in a Good Friday world (a world that experiences the presence of sin and evil). This book is an attempt to help the reader consider carefully a process of making moral decisions. The method of making moral decisions focuses on the Christian character, virtues, and conscience. Readers are guided to think more carefully about their life and decisions as they seek to know and do the will of God. An excellent book for small congregational study groups.
