The Problem of Knowledge in Descartes and the Empiricists Adolfo Sagastume

Descartes begins with the theory of knowledge, which is centered in Reason. Based on the free exercise of reason, Descartes said, I think, therefore I am: Cogito, ergo sum. What he means is: "I think therefore I am." I = I reason, I am: I think, therefore I am. Use one in the present tense. He says the existence precedes the thinker. First is the rationale, first is the thinking person and that is why it exists. This is the basis for claiming that Descartes first introduced the SUJETOCENTRISMO. The subject is the center of thought and the sun is the center of the solar system.
