What happened to the Christian church after Pentecost? How did the early church after A.D.100 grow diluted and diverted and become completely different from the New Testament pattern? Joe Tarry's new book, Christianity: from Light into Darkness, continues his series about the difficulty God has in maintaining a spiritual people. His previous books, Created to Be Spiritual, Jesus Restores True Spirituality, and The Last Week of the Seven Years and the Apostle John's Surprise, reveal how God's remnant clings to the true light of the Evangelical gospel despite Satan's onslaughts. Tarry maintains that six times in world history God starts over with his people; sometimes He does this with a very small remnant. His new book covers from A.D. 100 through the Reformation, which Tarry says is the seventh and last time God gives his people another chance and includes the part of history defined as the Dark Ages or the Middle Ages from A.D. 400 to 1500. He profiles various well-known Church-history figures such as Justin Martyr, John Wycliffe, Martin Luther, and John Calvin as well as gives summaries about the First and Second Great Spiritual Awakenings and brings the reader up through the end of the 18th century of the church's struggles. He examines some early attempts Satan uses to infiltrate Christianity and shows how God's remnant remains faithful through nearly two millennia.
