Honors in Practice 9 (Volume 9) Ada Long

This volume of Honors in Practice covers a spectrum from visionary to practical, providing an array of inspiration, insights, models, advice, and information in the service of honors education. At the same time, a recurrent motif in many of the essays is the conflict between safety and risk, structured achievement and challenging exploration. This motif, introduced in the first essay, threads its way through much of this volume of HIP so that, more than a collection of essays, it provides a discourse on the nature of honors education as a safe haven and a dangerous voyage.
