As Barack Obama's election and reelection as president painfully demonstrate, the socialists are outflanking constitutionalists. If constitutionalists wish to regain the advantage that they have lost, they have to remind Americans of the evils of socialism, and point out that there are indeed socialists in our midst, including Obama and a large percentage of his fellow Democrats. Will constitutionalists be accused of McCarthyism? Absolutely. Consider that when Angela Davis, who was the vice presidential candidate on the Communist Party USA ticket twice during the 1980s, spoke at Stanford University, the student newspaper did not mention that she was a communist. When asked why the newspaper did not identify her with her own chosen party affiliation, the editor responded, "That would be McCarthyism." Much that is labeled "McCarthyism" is actually the truth, and we should never shy away from the truth. In No Longer JFK's Party, Kevin Groenhagen, the author of Chapter 19: Defeating the Socialist Coalition and Restoring Our Constitutional Republic, outlines the truth about Obama and other Democrats' many connections to the Democratic Socialists of America and other socialist organizations. This is a truth that constitutionalists must share with other voters to reverse of the spread of socialism in the United States.
